LotusAutomation achieves Excellence Through People award

Lotus Automation IRL Ltd has achieved the Excellence Through People award. The company was formally awarded the Excellence Through people accreditation at a ceremony held in the Radisson SAS Hotel in Sligo on Friday 11th March.

Lotus Automation was established in 1989, the Head Office and manufacturing facility are based in Sligo, and the company also has offices in Cork, Dublin, London and Boston.

Lotus Automation currently employs 220 staff, here in Ireland and the US and has experienced considerable growth over the past two years. The industrial automation company offers a range of services and products to manufacturing and process industries and regularly enhances its capability to meet the needs of the ever changing industry.

Excellence Through People is Ireland's national standard for human resource development. There are two main objectives to the standard: to encourage the development of employees to full potential so as to maximize their contribution to the specific needs of the organisation and to show recognition for organisations that have achieved this aim.

Lotus Automation established a training team to effectively co-ordinate and implement training on behalf of the employees. Utilising the Excellence Through people framework, the company has ensured there is a manageable training plan in place with the planning process, training process and evaluation process closely monitored on an ongoing basis.

Speaking on behalf of the company Fergal Broder Managing Director stated: This is a great achievement for the company and an endorsement of our commitment to our staff, the accreditation brings together our business plan, training policy and our communication process ensuring we have a structured and coordinated approach moving forward.

The Excellence Through People award is a recognition of the skilled and motivated team of employees here, it also enables the company to adequately structure continuous training and improvement for the employees as the company develops in the future.
